SIOR conference draws 1,100 attendees from around the world

The Society of Industrial and Office Realtors (SIOR) hosted its annual Fall World Conference in New York City last week.

It was the organization's first time hosting the event in New York in 30 years.

The event drew 1,170 SIOR attendees to the Sheraton New York Times Square from over 17 countries, including Argentina, Germany, Japan, Korea, Mexico and Switzerland.

"It was an honor and privilege to host our Fall World Conference in New York City, especially as we celebrate our 75th Anniversary," said SIOR's Immediate Past President Allen Gump.

"The ability to bring together more than 1,000 members in one setting and exchange ideas in person in such an exciting venue helps advance our organization, highlight our accomplishments, and build towards the future while honoring the past."

During the conference, Geoffrey Kasselmann was installed as the new SIOR Global President.
